The Advent of a Flight Legend

Born in 1891, Earl Rogers first took to the skies in 1910. His passion for aviation quickly became evident, and he soon earned a reputation as a skilled and fearless pilot. In 1931, Rogers embarked on an audacious mission: to become the first person to fly around the world.

With unwavering determination, Rogers set off from Los Angeles in a Lockheed Vega 5B aircraft named City of Los Angeles. He faced countless challenges along the way, including treacherous weather, mechanical failures, and political obstacles. However, his unwavering spirit and meticulous planning carried him through.

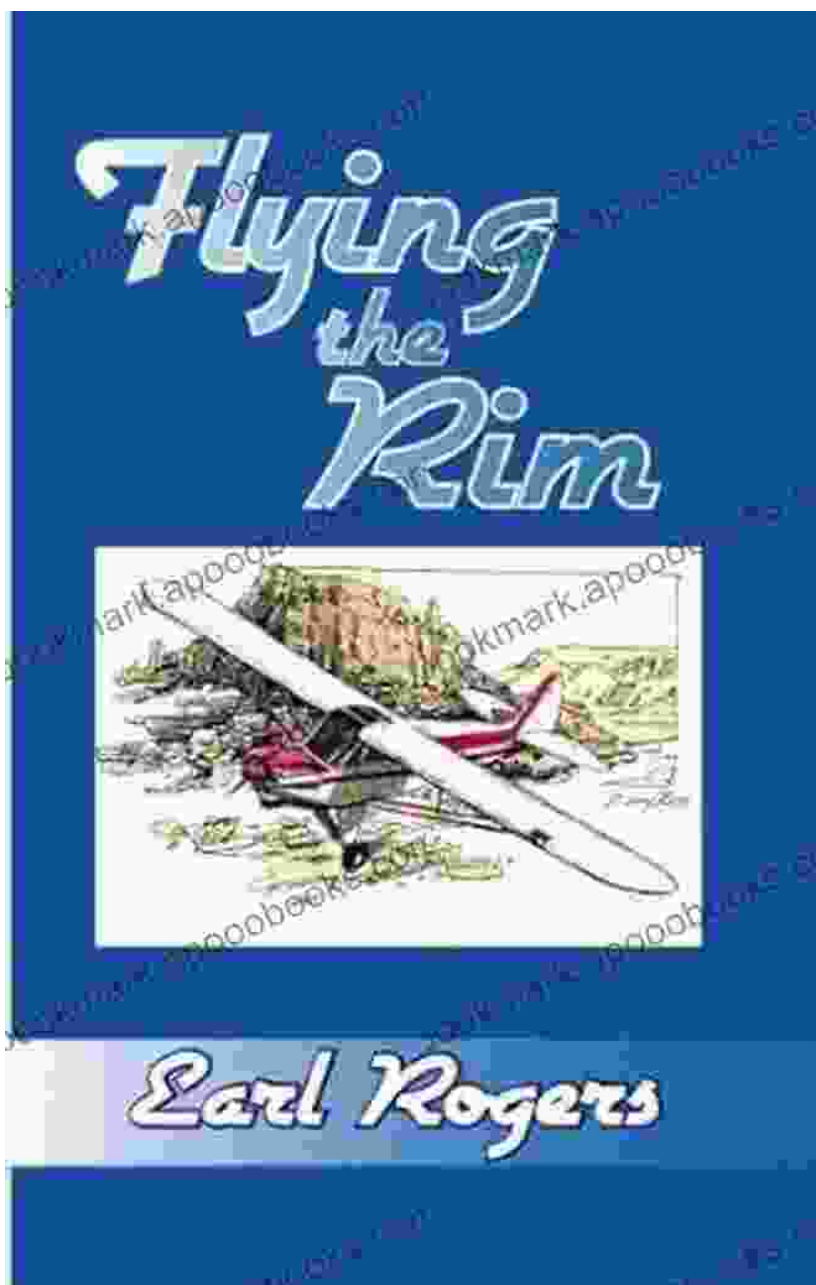

A Triumphant Return

After 19 days, 11 hours, and 30 minutes, Earl Rogers landed back in Los Angeles, completing the first round-the-world flight in aviation history. His feat captivated the world and earned him international acclaim. He became a national hero, inspiring countless young people to pursue their own dreams of flight.

In the years that followed, Rogers continued to push the boundaries of aviation. He set numerous speed and altitude records, and participated in the development of new aircraft and technologies. His contributions to the field of aerospace were immeasurable.
