The author, a leading expert on international affairs, analyzes the West's economic, political, and social systems, and shows how they have contributed to our current crisis. He argues that our focus on individualism and materialism has led to a decline in social solidarity and a loss of faith in our institutions. He also shows how our reliance on global supply chains has made us vulnerable to disruptions.

This book is a wake-up call for the West. It shows that we cannot continue to ignore the problems in our society. We need to address our economic inequality, our political polarization, and our environmental degradation. We need to build a more just and resilient society.

The author offers a roadmap for how we can fix these problems. He calls for a new social contract that emphasizes cooperation and solidarity. He also calls for a more balanced and sustainable economic system. And he argues that we need to take action to address climate change.

This book is an essential read for anyone who wants to understand the challenges facing the West today. It is a wake-up call that shows that we cannot continue to ignore the problems in our society. We need to address these problems head-on and build a better future for ourselves and our children.
