The Descent

The poems in To Drown As Cure For Thirst begin with the descent into addiction. The author, a survivor of addiction, paints a vivid picture of the insidious nature of the disease. The poems capture the allure of addiction, its promises of escape and oblivion, but also its dark and destructive nature.

Down the spiral staircase I fall,
Each step a plunge into the abyss.
The darkness envelops me,
Its icy grip suffocates my soul.”

The Abyss

In the abyss of addiction, the poems explore the depths of despair and self-destruction. The author lays bare the pain, the loneliness, and the overwhelming sense of hopelessness that consumes the addict.

I am lost in a desolate wasteland,
A barren void where hope has died.
The demons of addiction torment me,
Their whispers echoing in my mind.”

The Struggle

Despite the darkness that envelops the addict, the poems in To Drown As Cure For Thirst also speak to the resilience of the human spirit. The struggle for recovery is an arduous one, but the poems offer glimpses of hope and redemption.

I stumble and fall, but I will not give up,
The fight for recovery is my only hope.
I cling to the remnants of my strength,
And I will emerge from this darkness.”

The Triumph

The final poems in To Drown As Cure For Thirst celebrate the triumph of recovery. The author shares their own journey of healing and transformation, offering inspiration and hope to those still struggling in the depths of addiction.

I have emerged from the darkness,
Cleansed and renewed by the fire of recovery.
I stand tall, a survivor,
A testament to the power of the human spirit.”
